Thanks to Our 2006 Union Members and Supporters

Welcome to our revised and updated WisCOSH 2006 Resource Directory. We hope to reach out to people in the community, and help them connect with the resources they need to fight for safer workplaces.

WisCOSH is an independent organization that works closely with the Wisconsin State AFL-CIO, unions, and other occupational safety and health groups across the United States and North America.

Since 1978, WisCOSH has made worker safety and health its top priority. Since we're not a government agency, our strength and effectiveness depends on our members. Thanks to all of you!

Mourn for the Dead, Fight for the Living...

Workers Memorial Day 2006

This year began with a workplace tragedy – an explosion at the Sago mine in West Virginia that claimed the lives of 12 coal miners. But the Sago disaster was not an isolated event. Every day in the United States, 15 workers die from occupational injuries. Before this year is over, thousands of workers will be killed on the job and millions will be injured or stricken with occupational illnesses. Most of these deaths occur one at a time and go largely unnoticed, but each of these deaths is an unnecessary tragedy.

Listed below are the names of Wisconsin workers who lost their lives in 2005. According to the Wisconsin Workers Compensation Division, there were 85 workplace fatalities last year, but we have the names of only 52. This report is dedicated to all of those who have lost their lives due to workplace injuries or diseases.

Wisconsin Military Deaths, 2005-2006

As of August 28, 2006, the Iraq War has claimed the lives of 2634 US soldiers, including 2137 in combat. The 497 non-combat deaths include everything from vehicle and firearms accidents to drownings and suicides. According to the US Department of Defense, 19,890 have been wounded in action. But that number may actually be as high as 48,000 when you include those treated for injuries, illnesses, and psychological trauma.

The Iraq War has the potential to claim many more US and Iraqi casualties, both military and civilian. Fifty-nine Wisconsin troops have been killed in Iraq. Twenty-seven have died since the start of 2005. Their names and hometowns are listed below.

Cutting corners is costly

In the debate over public service spending, unwise politicians try to cut costs by eliminating the jobs of front-line workers. The results stretch thin the working people who perform many vital and dangerous jobs that keep our society running. Whether working on a road repair crew or as a correctional officer, safety requires enough staff to get the job done, safely and efficiently. When corners are cut, the cost to our members is more than mere money. Our lives are on the line, every day. Safety isn't cheap. But neither is a dangerous workplace.
